

Example Conclusion

Stanford Model:

- Reflect on how there are two sides to a topic - 2 sentences
- Restate/reword the thesis – 1 sentence
- Last sentence a statement, not a question (last sentence)

There is a lot of information that can be learned by observing a person from the outside such as: personal style, interests and socioeconomic status. This surface level observation often fails to truly encapsulate a person's true feelings, desires or fears. The feminist mermaids Kyrie, Ondine and Marina and Oliver's chess playing dog Frump, prove Delilah's observation that what you see is not always what you get. Between the Lines shows the reader that there is more than what meets the eye in books and in life.
